Regarding Winter's Receivership.

Writing from Portland James Griggs of the Appling-Griggs Co., which had the sub-contract for installing the heating plant in the federal building, disclaims responsibility for causing the financial embarrassment of J. S. Winters, the general contractor. He states that some damage was caused when the boiler from up last winter and declares this resulted from Mr. Winters' failure to keep up the temperature in the building to the contract point. However, the amount this mistake involved was less than $1000 and in no wise responsible for the receivership, says the letter. Mr. Griggs states that Mr. Winters' troubles result from his general financial condition. He says Mr. Winters has left Portland and his present whereabouts are unknown.
